

Are you a MUSIC THERAPIST or interested in the ARTS AND HEALTH?

*In celebration of her new book, Scales to Scalpels,
Lesley University's Institute for Arts and Health invites you to spend your lunch hour with:*

Dr. Lisa Wong

Pediatrician and Musician with the Longwood Symphony Orchestra

Monday, October 29, 2012
12:00 - 1:00pm

University Hall Room 4-023
Porter Campus, Lesley University
(1815 Massachusetts Ave, Cambridge, MA)

Please feel welcome to bring your lunch!

Dr. Wong will be sharing some of her thoughts about the many connections between music and healing, from the perspective of the medical musician, caregivers and patients, and will touch a bit on the exciting field of the neuroscience of music.

An excerpt from Dr. Lisa Wong's Foreword in Scales to Scalpels:

"We have devoted our lives to healing our community. Over the past century, medical discoveries and technology have eradicated many diseases, improved quality of life, and increased life expectancy. But there are limits to what medical technology can do. As doctors, we need to return to our medical roots. Often, a diagnosis is made not by another lab test or CAT scan but by sitting quietly with our patient. A person's 'vital signs' go beyond temperature and blood pressure to temperament and emotion. Our musical training helps us to listen, not just hear, and to recognize that there is a song in every diagnosis."

LESLEY
UNIVERSITY

To RSVP or for more information about this book signing, please contact Beth Chambers at 617.349.8833 or echambe5@lesley.edu. Walk-ins welcome!